Barney McFee, a clerk in the service of the Canadian North West Mounted Police, is finally given the long desired opportunity of going out on a case. Inspector McGrath sends him out to bring in John Ramsay, wanted for murder. Barney, enthusiastic over the chance given ~~him~~ given him, rushes off to tell his sweetheart, Dorothy Alden, daughter of an ex-Mounted Policeman. She seems strangely upset at the news.

Later Barney is told that the man for whom he's looking ~~was~~ went out with Dorothy who called for him. Barney accuses Dorothy of harboring a criminal, forces his way into a room in her cabin and finds his man. He takes him away despite the pleadings of his sweetheart whose brother ~~is~~ the criminal is, and with heavy heart turns his captive over to the Inspector. Dorothy, proud that her lover is a real man, relents and forgives Barney.
